Hot weather is a significant factor in the formation of ground-level ozone, a pollutant that can cause health problems such as the Healthy Air Act, have reduced emissions of the pollutants that, when cooked by the sun, can create ozone pollution.