Fort Meade To Rebuild Stream

Environmental Enhancement to benefit wildlife and create wetlands

Top - The stream segment leading to Burba Lake supports little or no vegetation and is subject to erosion which allows nutrients and sediments into the lake.

Center - Concrete aqueducts will be removed and the area will be replanted with native shrubs and grasses to return the area to a more natural state

Below - In addition to providing wildlife habitat, an upland buffer will intercept water runoff and should improve water quality.

by Bill Price

Fort Meade will begin an extensive restoration project that will benefit wildlife habitat and aid in pollution reductions under a February 1999 settlement with the Maryland Department of the Environment. The project is in lieu of a $75,000 penalty for waste management violations and resultant contamination at the military installation's Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office (DRMO) Salvage Yard.

Commonly referred to as the Burba Lake Project, the enhancement effort will include establishment of riparian vegetation buffers, stream bank stabilization, the removal of a concrete aqueduct, and other components to control run-off.

The approximately 700-foot stream segment located above Burba Lake is a relatively straight channel that supports little stream bank vegetation. The stream characteristically receives sporadic high water which has resulted in stream bank erosion and scouring of the stream channel allowing increases of nutrients and sediment into Burba Lake.

Logs will be anchored at locations in the main channel of the stream to form check dams. These structures will reduce stream channel scouring and stream bank erosion by reducing the pace of the flowing stream. Additional shallow pool stream habitat also will be provided by the structures.

Wetlands and riparian vegetation buffers will be created. As part of the project, the current stream configuration will be modified to include a shallow overflow wet meadow plant community. This wetlands area will allow a portion of high water flows to be detained and filtered. The wetlands plant community will be composed primarily of native Maryland plants.

Additionally, an upland vegetation buffer, 15-

25 feet wide, will be created along the entire stream segment. This area will be a no-mow zone to allow vegetation to re-establish through natural succession. In addition to providing wildlife habitat, the upland buffer will intercept water runoff and should improve water quality.

A concrete flume, which currently delivers stormwater runoff to the stream, will be removed. The remaining swale and adjacent areas will be established with native shrubs and grasses.

Aside from the aesthetic benefits, the project will reduce the water flow and promote infiltration of overland flows to help reduce the movement of nutrients and sediment. The function, composition and structure of the plant community will be enhanced and also will provide wildlife habitat.

Fort Meade must spend at least $75,000 on the enhancement project and provide MDE with documentation of the associated costs. Fort Meade is currently pursuing appropriate permits from MDE, the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers and Anne Arundel County before the project may begin.
